To a City Lost in Translation [excerpt]

This city is built on the ashes of another city, and the abandoned buildings sing to him

Is it fun playing a cougar?
I don’t like that word. For me, this is how I look at it: When you love, you love. Age is just a number.

What is the key to staying so successful?
More than anything, you have to enjoy what you do. If you can look back and say you had fun, then no regrets.

Do you ever miss the ’90s?
All the time. I reminisce about the great memories. That’s a special moment in my life and always will be.

I challenge anyone to do one tour in Iraq, let alone four, and come back home to the United States and just pick up right where they left off. At the end of the day Chris Kyle was a hero, and Bradley Cooper's portrayal of Chris was extraordinary. My thoughts, my gratitude and my prayers are with the Kyle family.
Cynthia S. Brown Franklin. Tenn.

I'm glad Taya Kyle is able to find some peace in the fact that Chris's memory will not be forgotten and that his story is being told to millions of people through the film American Sniper. He served this country and saved the lives of many and is someone we should look up to.

As a volunteer at assisted living facilities, I've met so many people who "came out" in their 70s and 80s. They were married for decades and raised children because, as they've told me, it was "what you were supposed to do back then, otherwise you'd be ostracized, jailed or even killed." The inner peace that comes with age, plus society's changing attitudes, have helped older gay men and women accept who they really are.

People UPDATE

Murder Trial for Ex-Patriot

Three days before his former teammates won the Super Bowl on Feb. 1, ex-New England Patriot Aaron Hernandez went on trial for murder and weapons charges. Hernandez, 25, is accused of orchestrating the killing of Odin Lloyd, 27, a semipro football player, 20 months ago in North Attleborough, Mass. Prosecutors presented physical evidence they say points to Hernandez's guilt, including footprints at the crime scene and DNA found on a spent shell casing. His defense countered that Hernandez, whom they portrayed as a do-gooder from a tough upbringing, was friends with Lloyd and wouldn't have killed him. Two of Hernandez's associates also stand accused of the 2013 murder.

CHARGED Coverage of the former tight end's arrest appeared in our July 15, 2013, issue.

FIRST LOOK! JOHN WAYNE'S PHOTO ARCHIVE

Hold it, pilgrim—we've got some pictures to show you. The estate of film legend John Wayne now owns some 100,000 images taken by John Hamilton, who shot stills for 77 films from the '40s until the '90s before he died in 1997. He was able to "capture those golden, special moments," says Wayne's son Ethan, who runs the estate. The photos are for sale at johnhamiltoncollection.com, with some of the proceeds benefiting the John Wayne Cancer Foundation. But if you can't pony up for one of these shots, try one of Duke bourbon, created by the younger Wayne, who used to pack his dad's car—hooch included—for desert film shoots. Says Wayne: "It takes me back to when I was 8 years old."

Matthew Shepard's Legacy

A new documentary offers an intimate look at the young gay man whose brutal 1998 murder spurred hate-crime laws

Judy and Dennis Shepard don't go a day without thinking about their son Matthew, a gay college student who, at 21, was tied to a fence and brutally murdered in Laramie, Wyo., in 1998. But they hadn't heard his voice for years until they screened Matt Shepard Is a Friend of Mine, a new documentary by Matthew's high school friend and filmmaker Michele Josue. The film (opening Feb. 6) features digitized home footage the Shepards hadn't been able to bring themselves to view—until now. "I can hear Matt laugh again," Judy tells PEOPLE of the movie. "The hardest part is when [it's] over and he's gone." The Shepards channeled their grief into campaigning for lesbian-gay-bisexual-transgender rights, most notably a 2009 law signed by President Obama extending hate-crime status to acts of violence based on sexual orientation. The parents, who gave Josue, 36, access to Matthew's letters and journals, appreciate her layered portrait of a gentle, optimistic young man whose unwitting contribution to the gay-rights movement brings both satisfaction and renewed pain to those who loved him most. "Every step forward, I think, 'I wish you were here to see it,'" Judy says. "I'd trade everything to have Matt back."

T-Swift to Trademark 1989 Lyrics

The savvy singer wants to own popular phrases from her hit album

Taylor Swift, 25, has applied to trademark a slew of phrases from songs on last year's 1989 album. According to paperwork filed late last year with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, that means phrases like "This Sick Beat," "Nice to Meet You. Where You Been?" and "Could Show You Incredible Things" could one day show up on Swift-branded makeup, temporary tattoos, key chains and home décor. That way we can all "Party Like It's 1989." (And yes, she wants to trademark that line too.)

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Stowe with her father, Robert, in 1961.

Madeleine Stowe

The Revenge star, 56, raises awareness about the disease that took her dad's life

I was about 5 years old when my father was first diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. I remember he deteriorated very, very rapidly. By the time I was 6, he was on crutches and could barely walk. By the time I was 7, he was in a wheelchair. We learned to tie my father's shoes, dress him, bathe him, do all these things that children typically aren't exposed to. That was the heartbreak he went through—losing his faculties. I felt guilt. I felt empathy. I wanted him to stand up. I wanted him to be cured. I wanted him to survive. But he passed away when I was 23. There is still no cure for MS, but there has been tremendous progress made. If you take action very quickly, you can prolong people's lives, and they can live a very full existence. With Lights, Camera, Take Action on MS [a campaign created by Genzyme, the makers of a MS medication], we are going around the country talking to MS patients and their caretakers so they can not only learn their treatment options, but more importantly share their stories, connect with one another and not hide in the shadows. I wish my father could have had some of these opportunities that are available now.

BOBBI KRISTINA BROWN
WHY NO ONE COULD SAVE HER

BY MICHELLE TAUBER

IN THE DAYS SINCE HIS 21-year-old daughter Bobbi Kristina was found unresponsive in a bathtub and admitted to a Georgia hospital on Jan. 31, Bobby Brown has maintained a vigil, spending hours beside his beloved "Krissi," whose mom was the late Whitney Houston. "He stands over her and touches her hair and calls her 'baby girl,'" a Brown relative told PEOPLE on Feb. 2. At press time she remained unresponsive, breathing only with the aid of a ventilator—but family members had not given up all hope, taking turns at the bed where her slight body was covered in tubes →

Bobbi (left, in 2012, and inset, with her mom in 2009) "had no support system," says a friend, "because that family just fights all the time."

and blankets. "If she's in there somewhere, we want her to hear us," says the relative. "So we'll talk about good times with the family, funny stories about when she was a baby. We'll sing songs—'Jesus Loves Me,' 'Amazing Grace,' but also some of Whitney's songs. We've been singing 'Greatest Love of All.' Bobby has sung that to her too." As the hours and days ticked by without any sign of a response, loved ones were forced to face the unimaginable: that she might not recover at all. "Bobby is the one who will make the decisions," the relative says of any plans to remove the ventilator. "But Bobby has told us, 'If America thinks she is dead, they will stop praying. And at this point, we want people to pray for a miracle.'"

'BOBBY HAS TOLD US, "IF AMERICA THINKS SHE IS DEAD, THEY WILL STOP PRAYING. . . . WE WANT PEOPLE TO PRAY FOR A MIRACLE"'
—BROWN RELATIVE

The tragic scene comes within a little more than a week of the third anniversary of Houston's death—in an eerie parallel, the superstar was also found unresponsive in a bathtub, at age 48 in 2012. (Houston's death was ruled an accidental drowning caused by drug use and heart disease.) "She was distraught over the anniversary," a source says of Bobbi Kristina, who had tweeted on Jan. 26, "miss you mommy. . . SO much. . . loving you more every sec." Although the Houston family long had tensions with Brown over his influence on Whitney, sources on both sides say they have come together amid the crisis. For Bobbi Kristina's father, the situation is "his worst nightmare," a family insider says of Brown, 46. "Losing Whitney was hard, but this is a million times worse. To lose Krissi the same way would devastate him."

Sadly, many of those who have watched Bobbi Kristina struggle had feared such a tragedy for years. Authorities have not said whether drugs were involved, but "Bobbi Kristina will be the first person to say that she has used [drugs] in the past," says another Brown relative. (Maxwell

1. Houston (with Brown and Bobbi Kristina in '93) called her daughter "my reason to be" in 1995. 2. The singer (onstage with Bobbi Kristina in 1999) said shortly before her death, "She supports me, she loves me, she gives me good mommy hugs." 3. Cissy (right, with Bobbi Kristina at Houston's funeral in 2012) "worried about her granddaughter," says a source. 4. Brown tweeted a sweet pic with "Krissi" last summer.

Her Rocky Romance

ALTHOUGH GORDON was never adopted by Houston, he was largely raised by her—so when he and Bobbi Kristina took their romance public just after Houston's death, they faced strong criticism. "He's one of the only people who can get through to her sometimes," a source close to the family said in 2012, "and I think sometimes he uses that to his advantage." They said they were married in January 2014, but an insider says it was never a legal union. He has been at Bobbi Kristina's bedside, but "he's not the next of kin," says a Brown source.

Lomas, a Georgia man who was at the house when she was found unresponsive, was arrested last month on drug charges.) A family friend says she was also plagued by relationship problems with longtime love Nick Gordon, who was present at the house as well (see box). "They were having issues, but they always did," says the pal. Adds another close family source: "She's been vacillating between extremes for a while now and is fighting grief and demons of her own creation. The loss of her mom and her intense craving for attention are just the tip of her mountain of issues."

'SHE'S BEEN VACILLATING BETWEEN EXTREMES FOR A WHILE NOW AND IS FIGHTING GRIEF AND DEMONS OF HER OWN CREATION'
—FAMILY SOURCE

The only child of Brown and Houston faced imposing odds from the start: Both her parents publicly struggled with drug abuse throughout their tempestuous 14-year marriage—it was a source of strife between feuding family members—and much of her childhood played out in the glare of the spotlight. "She never had structure," a source told PEOPLE in 2012. "Being the child of such reckless fame was bad for her, the fights and the divorce of her parents were worse, and then with the death of her mother, Bobbi Kristina has suffered more than anyone knows."

No one took Houston's death harder than her daughter, who suffered a breakdown after learning the news but put on a brave face for the Grammy winner's funeral a few days later. The loss left an agonizing void. "It is all too overwhelming for a young girl who grew up so scattered," the source said after Houston's death. Adds the family friend: "She misses her mother a lot. She hasn't been the same since Whitney died."

Several family members say that her relationship with Gordon was isolating. "Nobody understands her, nobody understands Nick, people just need to stay out of her business—this is the way she speaks now," a Houston family friend said in 2012. The pair "were a hot mess," says an Atlanta source. Tearing out of their gated community each morning on the way to Taco Bell, CVS or other favorite pit stops, "he would go, like, 100 miles per hour, and she would always hang out the window singing." Still, "I don't want to blame Nick for any drug use, because that's not fair," says the Brown relative. "Bobby was blamed for Houston's drug use, and that's always bothered him. Whitney was a grown woman who made her own choices. Krissi makes her own choices too."

Her heartbroken family desperately wishes those choices had been different. In an open letter to her granddaughter in 2013, Houston's mom, Cissy, addressed her "baby's baby" and the romance with Gordon, writing, "I want you to have a good life that you can be proud of. Do I want you to get married in the near future? No, I don't. I think you're too young and I wish you'd wait. But that's because I'm Grandma. I'm supposed to worry about you." And in a conversation with Bobbi Kristina last fall, "I said, 'You know we're worried about you. I hope you're not using,'" recalls the Brown family relative. "She said, 'I know how my mother died, and I've learned from her mistakes.'"

SOFIA & REESE STAR IN

HOT PURSUIT

Heads turn whenever Reese Witherspoon walks into a room—but nothing prepared her for working alongside Sofia Vergara in the upcoming film Hot Pursuit. "Literally every person stares at her," Witherspoon tells PEOPLE. "Men fall on the floor; women drop their purses. It's like a commercial! Her hair is in slow motion." In the movie (out May 8) Witherspoon portrays a cop opposite Vergara's former beauty queen. The two "have absolutely no business being friends," says Witherspoon. In reality the women hit it off immediately. "Sofia's so sweet," she adds. "I totally fell under her spell."

BOSOM BUDDIES Vergara "is almost a modern Lucille Ball—she's a great physical comedian," says Witherspoon. "I just love how self-deprecating she is; she understands what's funny about herself. You can't not watch her."

THE ODD COUPLE In the film Witherspoon's "inept" police officer must protect Vergara (who plays a drug dealer's widow) from criminals—and dirty cops. "Her character is so sexy and suave, and I'm so dorky," says Witherspoon.

SCREAMING FUN The pair struggled while shooting scenes "because we were laughing so hard," says Witherspoon. Her kids Ava, 15, and Deacon, 11, had the same reaction: "It's the ultimate compliment when your teenager likes it."

TRANSFORMATION

What has the reaction been since it was revealed that Coach Beiste, your character on Glee, would be transitioning from female to male? I had thousands of tweets from people. I was crying. Members of the transgender community were saying, "I never thought I'd see myself on TV. You have no idea what this means to me. Now, maybe people will get it." Did you have any hesitations? I just didn't want to let down the straight tomboys that my character represented for four seasons. From Laverne Cox to Bruce Jenner, transgender people are more prevalent than ever in pop culture. One of the things people ask is what makes it so important now. And I say, "Now? It was always important." (For more on Jenner, see page 56.) What do you think of your physical transformation? I make a good-looking dude, huh? —PATRICK GOMEZ

HE KNEW THEM WHEN...

SOME OF HOLLYWOOD'S BIGGEST STARS GOT THEIR START ON TV DRAMAS WRITTEN BY THE 42-YEAR-OLD ARROW EXEC PRODUCER AND OSCAR HEAD WRITER. BERLANTI SHARES HIS MEMORIES

CHRIS PRATT
Everwood
The future Guardians of the Galaxy star played Emily VanCamp's brother Bright in this 2002–2006 WB series. "We would write comedic scenes and he would do them heartfelt, and we'd write heartfelt and he did them funny. I'd never experienced that before with an actor."

BRADLEY COOPER
Jack & Bobby
The Oscar nominee played Christine Lahti's boy toy in the WB's 2004–2005 fictional take on the Kennedy brothers. "There was no scene that was unimportant or too small. He was so focused. Also, he's an Irish-Italian like me—it's the perfect combo."

THEO JAMES
Golden Boy
Before he broke out as Shailene Woodley's lover in Divergent, James played a detective in this 2013 CBS drama. "I asked him to promise me that when the movie became a massive hit, he'd get me an autographed photo of himself for my niece. He did!"

MICHELLE WILLIAMS & KATIE HOLMES
Dawson's Creek
Berlanti was still wet behind the ears when he wrote for the WB drama in the late 1990s. "We were all the same age. We kind of grew up together! Michelle was laid-back, while Katie made dinner dates. She was very proper." —LYNETTE RICE

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, RE… WEEK

Oh, goody! Saul reunites Breaking Bad costars Bob Odenkirk (right) and Jonathan Banks.

BEN LEUNER/AMC

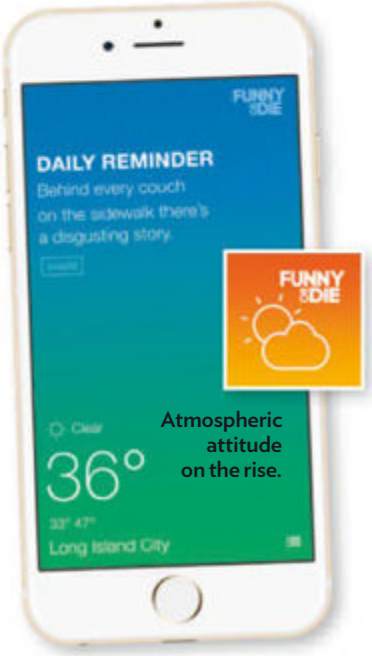

No. 1 Better Call Saul

The Breaking Bad prequel stars Bob Odenkirk as a lowlife lawyer who's bound to keep sinking

TV COMEDY/DRAMA Breaking Bad wouldn't seem to be a show that could spawn any living thing. A hot glob of lava generally just cools off into dead stone. But this very promising spinoff, which imagines the backstory of sleazeball lawyer Saul Goodman (Odenkirk), comes out wriggling—recognizably Bad in its sharp appreciation of the evil that men do, but distinctive in a narrative that has a slower, less regular pulse. At this point Saul the rat is a minor rodent named Jimmy McGill, too incompetent to succeed in a firm or his own practice. Soon, however, he gropes his way toward the darkness. The show requires Odenkirk to convey an unpleasant but funny quality of smarmy innocence. He aces it. (AMC, Feb. 8, 10 p.m.)

No. 2 Funny or Die Weather

APP HUMOR If you like barometric jokes—after all, weather is like death and taxes—this app from Funny or Die is for you. The local forecast is real, but each daily update comes with its own gag: "Snowwomen make 70 cents for every dollar a Snowman makes." (Free iTunes download.)

Thandie Newton and Melissa George (seated), as the mother of the distraught child.

No. 3 The Slap

One ill-considered act throws a family into turmoil

TV DRAMA Based on an acclaimed Australian miniseries (and novel), The Slap at first feels very Brothers & Sisters—perhaps because the adaptation is written by B&S creator Jon Robin Baitz. It's another family whose surface warmth doesn't disguise a basic brittleness—only this time, everything shatters. At a birthday party, a prosperous, aggressive car dealer (Zachary Quinto, shrewdly cast against type as a bullying force of nature) belts a little boy whose horrible behavior is clearly rooted in a deeper developmental issue. Lawsuits are filed, apologies offered only to be angrily withdrawn, and every household is poisoned by a sort of emotional radon. A tough, unusual show. (NBC, Feb. 12, 8 p.m.)

Fatoumata Diawara as a woman punished for singing.

No. 4 Timbuktu

MOVIE DRAMA Gorgeous and gutting, Timbuktu takes the story of a cattle herder (Ibrahim Ahmed dit Pino) and turns it into an indictment of radical religion. This Mauritanian Oscar entry bursts with color and life, by turns whispering its rage, then erupting in gunfire. (Now playing, PG-13.)

No. 5 The Districts, A Flourish and a Spoil

MUSIC ROCK No member of this Philadelphia-based band is older than 20, but the Districts are uncommonly sophisticated in how they use raw rhythm and noise to express the oblique, passive anger of their lyrics. The guitars flat-out wail as Rob Grote sings, "I will not be bold." Loud but eloquent irony—huh! (Available Feb. 10.)

For more information on the settlement, including its terms and benefits, please go to the settlement website, www.KirinBeerSettlement.com or call (877) 695-7405.

If you wish to exclude yourself from the settlement (for purposes of damages claims only), you may opt out by submitting an opt out request in writing, postmarked by March 27, 2015, to the Oliva v. Björk finds the beauty in breaking up

MUSIC ALTERNATIVE After this latest album leaked online, Björk pulled a Madonna and released it two months early. The Icelandic enigma is known for her disjointed phrasing, electro beats and, of course, outlandish ensembles—remember that swan dress at the 2001 Oscars? But the theme of her latest effort is universal: heartache. Over mesmerizing strings and synths, Björk chronicles her split from her longtime love, artist Matthew Barney. On centerpiece "Black Lake," she asks elemental questions like, "Did I love you too much?" Her pain, set to an ethereal soundtrack, is hypnotic.

TV COMEDY

Manhattan's new towers are full of money, but the two young women of this funny series, now in season 2, live close to the ground: Compared to Lena Dunham, they're almost peasants. Abbi Jacobson and Ilana Glazer, the show's stars, don't accomplish much in any given day. They just do stuff to get to the next one. Although Ilana says she enjoys a heat wave—"All my senses are heightened, even my ethnic ambiguity. I was cat-called today in what I believe was Creole"—they'll attempt to misappropriate someone's air conditioner. Along with Billy Eichner, they're new, true emblems of the city's comic eccentricity. (Comedy Central, Wednesdays, 10:30 p.m.)

No. 9 The Walking Dead

TV

HORROR The second half of season 5 begins with everyone who's not dead—or zombiqué—grieving over a loss that began with a pair of scissors. The survivors pause to reassess, but this just causes trauma for Noah (Tyler James Williams). Dead retains its horrible, unshakable power, but the episode has been given a dreamlike, sentimental framework. It's like sending a severed foot by gift basket. (AMC, Feb. 8, 9 p.m.)

Michonne (Danai Gurira) takes a detour—but to what new catastrophe?

Even on land, SpongeBob is never dry.

No. 10 The SpongeBob Movie: Sponge Out of Water

MOVIE

ANIMATION Maximum silliness and trippy visuals combine to make the sponge's second big-screen outing a pleasure for kids and adults. Burger flipper SpongeBob (voiced by Tom Kenny) and his pals go on a hunt for the missing secret formula for Krabby Patties in a kooky tale narrated by pirate Burger-Beard (Antonio Banderas, up for anything). There's time travel, madcap live-action scenes and more than enough laughs to satisfy. (Feb. 6, PG)

No. 11 Various Artists, Fifty Shades of Grey Original Motion Picture Soundtrack

MUSIC

POP Given that S&M is the subject of E L James's bestselling sensation and the new movie starring Jamie Dornan and Dakota Johnson, it should come as no surprise that this playlist is mood music and then some. The steamy set covers devotion (Ellie Goulding's "Love Me Like You Do"), lust ("Earned It" by the Weeknd) and every erotic shade in between. Seriously, it's got something for everyone: Annie Lennox, Skylar Grey, Sia, even Frank Sinatra. Forget bedroom eyes—this is bedroom ears. (Feb. 10)

The Weeknd, Beyoncé and Sia each contributed tunes to the passionate playlist.

EARLY DAYS Lauded for his good looks, Jenner (in 1980) was still dissatisfied with his appearance, undergoing plastic surgery in the '80s and again in 2009.

BRUCE JENNER REVEALS HE'S TRANSITIONING FROM MALE TO FEMALE. INSIDE THE EMOTIONAL JOURNEY AND HIS FAMOUS FAMILY'S REACTION

He's an Olympic gold medalist. A father of six. The easygoing, sometimes beleaguered patriarch of America's most famous reality-TV family, the Kardashians. But through his decades in the spotlight, Bruce Jenner never felt he could show the world who he really is—until now. "Bruce is transitioning to a woman," says a source close to his family. "He is finally happy, and his family is accepting of what he's doing. He's in such a great space." After months of speculation about his changing looks, Jenner, 65, plans to open up about his transition in a TV interview with Diane Sawyer and document the process in an E! series to air later this year. "He has come out to those closest to him," adds the family source. "He's so happy and excited."

The news has made headlines around the world—and many in the transgender community hope Jenner's fame will help foster greater understanding of the estimated 700,000 Americans on similar journeys. "I hope whatever

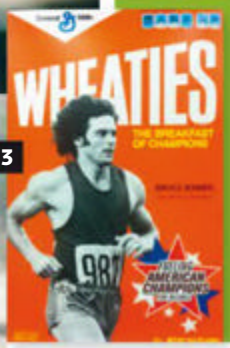

A NEW LIFE
"He feels liberated," says a source of Jenner (above, in 2009, and right, on Jan. 27).

1. "Bruce [in 1968] was always more aware of his looks than the average guy," says a source. 2. Jenner, who became a decathlete after a football injury, won Olympic gold in 1976. 3. Wheaties box fame. 4. Jenner (with son Brandon, now 33) is "a family guy," says a source. 5. With ex-wife Linda Thompson and son Burt, now 36, in 1980. 6. Jenner married Kris Kardashian in 1991, becoming stepdad to her four kids (from left, in 1995), Khloé, Kourtney, Rob and Kim.

Jenner is going through not only helps Jenner but all the rest of us," says transgender author Jennifer Finney Boylan (see box). Meanwhile, his family have been working out their own feelings. When a calm, prepared Jenner sat down with his children to discuss his decision face-to-face, at least some of his kids were stunned by the revelation. "Bruce told them everything—where things stood and what his plans were for the future, what everyone could expect," says a family insider. "The kids came around pretty quickly, but each of them had to process it in their own way. They're trying to show him love and acceptance. All they want is for him to be happy." (Since his family currently uses the pronoun "he" to refer to Jenner, PEOPLE is doing the same. "It's important not to get too ahead of the person transitioning," says Mary Andres, a clinical psychologist and associate professor of clinical education. "Let them take the lead and tell you when they're ready to be called by a different name or pronoun." Jenner did not respond to a request for comment on this story or for a preferred pronoun.)

A dad of six—from marriages to Chrystie Crownover, actress Linda Thompson and, most recently, reality matriarch Kris Jenner—Bruce also considers himself father to Kourtney, Kim, Khloé and Rob Kardashian, Kris's kids from her marriage to the late Robert Kardashian. Even as the reality show Keeping Up with the Kardashians launched the family into the pop-culture pantheon, some in Jenner's inner circle say they've known for years he was struggling with his gender identity. Behind closed doors, "he dressed as a woman," says a source in Jenner's circle. "It was always very closeted. He would have other people buy him [women's] clothes."

Following his 2013 split from Kris, Jenner underwent subtle but significant emotional and physical changes. "At first it seemed Bruce was rebelling against Kris," says a Kardashians production source. "He started to grow out his hair, and Kris didn't approve of

"This has been a learning experience," says a source close to the family. that." In 2013 Jenner joked about the longer locks: "I turned 64 two weeks ago, and I still have hair to grow. I'm celebrating!" In December 2013 the reality star underwent a laryngeal shave to minimize the appearance of his Adam's apple. And over the next year Jenner was photographed with manicured nails, highlights in his hair, diamond ear studs and lip gloss. Slowly, Jenner became more comfortable in his new look. "He walks in a more feminine way," the production source said in November. "His body language is more feminine; he's more soft-spoken." And sheltered in a quiet beachside Malibu community, where he often surfs, golfs and flies his beloved helicopters with sons Brandon and Brody, Jenner soon began to warm to the notion of telling his family the whole truth. Says the insider: "There was a lot they didn't know about their dad. The No. 1 thing is they all support Bruce." Adds the source close to the family: "It is an intense thing. Different people have different reactions, but everybody loves him." Reached by PEOPLE, Jen-

WHAT IT MEANS TO 'TRANSITION'

Experts explain the mental and physical journey of transgender people—and how families play a significant role

What does it mean to be transgender?
GLAAD defines transgender as "an umbrella term for people whose gender identity differs from what is typically associated with the sex they were assigned at birth." Whether one has sex-reassignment surgery is of no significance.

What are the steps?
The World Professional Association for Transgender Health first suggests counseling. Though there is no psychological illness associated with being transgender, "that psychological process is a helpful thing to a person overcoming obstacles and going through the process of self-discovery," says Dr. Marci Bowers, a surgeon who is transgender herself. Next, a doctor is likely to recommend hormone therapy and that the person live life in the desired gender role for at least a year, Bowers says. If the transgender person ultimately decides to undergo sex-reassignment surgery and other related surgical procedures, it can cost more than $70,000. "This isn't like a tattoo. It requires a lot of planning and thought," she says.

How does someone tell his or her family?
"[I'd tell someone transitioning,] 'Figure out who your allies are, and tell them first,'" says Mary Andres, an associate professor at the University of Southern California and a clinical psychologist. "'The people you are coming out to may be overwhelmed, so try to provide resources like books or blogs.'" Adds Bowers: "It's almost always harder on the people around the one transitioning. They have to say goodbye to the former person. Yes, they're the same person, but they do change." But Andres says it's a change for the better: "They've let go of the internal struggle."

ner's son Burt says his father is "doing awesome."

For his part Kourtney Kardashian's boyfriend Scott Disick was "floored," says the insider, "but is now on board." Kim's husband, Kanye West, "is totally fine with it," the insider adds. "He believes in live and let live, and he took it all in stride." Kim and her siblings are behind their dad too: "Kim checked with Kris first. Once she was satisfied that Kris was emotionally okay, she was able to give Bruce her unconditional support."

Despite hints in Bruce's behavior for years, multiple sources say that Kris was "shocked" by Bruce's admission. "It's really a hard adjustment for her," says a source in Bruce's inner circle. Adds the insider: "Kris had the most difficult time in the family. She's looking back at their entire marriage, and a lot of things are suddenly making sense. She has had a lot to process." Sources say Jenner, who remains attracted to women, hasn't yet shared whether he plans to change his name or have more surgery. "No one feels deceived by Bruce," says the insider. "He was going through this change slowly. It's not like he woke up one day and was like, 'Surprise!' He moved through his own feelings and his own changes at his own pace."

At his own pace—and on his own terms. "This is his story, and [his family] wants him to tell the world the way he wants," says the source close to the family. "He's more and more confident," notes the production source. "He's doing what makes him happy." Jenner "is going to be relieved just being able to be himself," says Laura Jane Grace, the lead singer of punk band Against Me!, who revealed her transition from male to female in Rolling Stone in 2012. "Being in control of the dialogue … that's what it should be about."

'Bruce is in a great space. And his family wants to empower him to tell his story'
—A FAMILY SOURCE

As the dust from Jenner's announcement settles, those close to him hope he will get the support and respect he deserves. Says the source in Jenner's circle: "He's 65. That's a long time to keep something secret." Sharing his truth has been like "laying down a bag of bricks," says the source close to the family. "It's liberating. He's been through a dark period and is coming out on the other side."

FATHER FIGURE
Jenner, who walked Kim down the aisle at her 2014 nuptials, has her "unconditional support," says a source close to the family.

A TRANSGENDER MOM'S JOURNEY

"Having a father who became a woman has helped my sons become better men," says Jennifer Finney Boylan, 56, who underwent hormone therapy and gender-reassignment surgery in 2002. "They have learned you have to find the courage to do things that people will criticize." Boylan, an author and Barnard professor who serves on the board of GLAAD, is also celebrating 27 years of marriage with wife Deirdre this year. Though they went through a tough period of adjustment, "most of the things that brought us together in the first place are still right at the center of our relationship," she says.

A TREASURE TROVE OF NEVER-BEFORE-SEEN PHOTOS SHOWS CAMELOT'S KING AND QUEEN IN (BAREFOOT) WEEKEND MODE

They were the most powerful, dazzling couple on the planet, but on that August weekend in 1961, President John F. Kennedy and Jackie were just vacationers—shirtless, barefoot and hanging out with pals. An extraordinary cache of never-before-seen pictures, to be sold on Feb. 19 by Boston's RR Auction House, show another side of the First Couple. "These are the masters of the universe in their downtime, smoking and having clam chowder in a beach shack," says Pamela Keogh, author of Jackie Style. "This was not Jacqueline in French couture."

The photos were taken at the vast Cape Cod estate of Jackie's heiress confidante Rachel "Bunny" Mellon and her husband, Paul, one of the wealthiest men in the U.S. Along with friends including then Washington Post publisher Phil Graham and his wife, Katharine, the Kennedys reveled in a way they never did in the limelight: Jackie is captured laughing, not trying to hide her size-10 feet, and smoking a cigarette. "She never wanted the public to see her smoking,"

Easy Living
The President and First Lady "were so casual every weekend on Cape Cod," says Clint Hill. "This is how you would see them." Above, Jackie chats with painter William Walton; below, JFK and Bunny Mellon dig in.

says her longtime Secret Service agent Clint Hill, author of Mrs. Kennedy and Me. And the President, Hill says, "was rarely seen shirtless by the public and preferred not to be seen eating." The Kennedys, who maintained strict control over their image, would seldom be photographed looking so carefree again. "It's like a curtain being lifted on the White House," says Keogh. "This was the real Jack and Jackie—the ones their friends knew." ●

Friends with Benefits
Jackie (at left, with JFK, center, and his sister Eunice, right) "felt safe with Bunny [in hat]" says Keogh. "She was discreet and had pots of money. There was no limit to what she could do."

Also up for auction on Feb. 19: photos of the First Family's Virginia country home and Jackie's handwritten directives for its decor. In 1962 the Kennedys bought about 40 acres in Virginia's horse country and built a weekend getaway. JFK "would have preferred to go somewhere with water," says Clint Hill. "He didn't ride horses." But Jackie, a passionate equestrienne, took a hands-on interest in the 5,050-sq.-ft. home, overseeing its creation from the ground up. "She cut pages from French magazines and Better Homes and Gardens for ideas," says Bobby Livingston, vice president of RR Auction. "She was always trying to keep the costs down." Sadly, she and JFK spent only two weekends there—the last in November 1963. "She seldom went back after the assassination," Hill says. "It wasn't the same."

1. Touring the grounds of their Virginia property with John Jr. and their friend LeMoyne Billings in October 1963. 2. Caroline's bedroom. 3. Jackie's bedroom. "The President's was smaller," notes Hill. 4. Jackie's notes and clippings from decorating magazines. 5. The First Lady's requests included one (below) for "inexpensive ashtrays . . . as I don't want to use my good ones." 6. The house, she wrote, "has EVERYTHING—all the places we all need to get away from each other."

PUBLICLY ACCUSED—BUT NEVER CONVICTED—OF THREE MURDERS OVER THE PAST 30 YEARS, THE RECLUSIVE SCION OF A WEALTHY NEW YORK REAL ESTATE FAMILY FINALLY SPEAKS OUT IN A NEW HBO DOCUMENTARY BY STEVE HELLING

Though his family's New York real estate fortune is an estimated $4.4 billion, Robert Durst lives fairly quietly these days. Neighbors sometimes see him buying bread at the local market or strolling around the block from his $1.75 million Harlem townhouse. But for Durst, life has never been mundane. From his mother's violent death—she plunged from the roof of the family's mansion when Robert was just 7 years old—to the disappearance of his first wife in 1982, the execution-style murder of a close friend in 2000 and the death at his own hand of a neighbor the next year, a horrific, macabre

Marriage, Mystery and Murder: A Timeline

1973
Robert says he and Kathleen were blissfully happy until he forced her to have an abortion. "I didn't want kids," he says. "I knew I wasn't going to be a good father."

1982
Robert says he had a "pushing, shoving argument" with Kathleen on Jan. 31, the last time she was seen alive. He called police four days later but admits to lying to them about talking to her from New York.

2000
Robert's longtime friend Susan Berman was found shot execution-style in her California home on Dec. 23. Robert was questioned in the case but never charged.

trail of blood and suspicion has followed him over three decades. "He's the one who got away," retired Galveston homicide detective Cody Cazalas tells PEOPLE. "In my entire career, I never saw a more clear-cut case of murder. I still can't believe he's not in jail."

Charming, manipulative, murderous or misunderstood, the notoriously media-averse, reclusive Robert, 71, is finally stepping into the spotlight. On Feb. 8 at 8 p.m., HBO premieres its six-part documentary series The Jinx: The Life and Deaths of Robert Durst, which examines the disappearance of his then-29-year-old wife Kathleen, whose body has never been found, and his trial and acquittal for the murder of Morris Black in Galveston. And for the first time, Robert tells his version of events. "He really wanted to tell his side," says director Andrew Jarecki, who also helmed the Ryan Gosling/Kirsten Dunst movie All Good Things, based on Robert's life. "He's very intelligent and very well-spoken. After hearing what he has to say, people are going to feel like they know him a lot better." Adds producer Marc Smerling: "You have to listen to Robert carefully. There's a lot of depth there. He talks about multiple levels of his life."

It was a life that began full of privilege and promise. The oldest of four children born to Seymour and Bernice Durst, Robert describes his memories of life before his mother died as "happy, happy, happy." But he gives a chilling account in the documentary of his memory of the night she died: "My father got me and said, 'Come on over here, I want you to see Mommy.' We looked out a window onto the roof, and there was Mommy. I waved at Mommy; I don't know if she saw me. All of a sudden I heard the maids shouting, 'She's off the roof!' She had a long, long fall." Though her death was ruled an accident, Robert believes it was a suicide. But Robert's estranged brother Douglas maintains that his brother distorted the events surrounding their mother's death to gain sympathy. "Your docudrama relies on Robert's self-serving, revisionist and fictitious account of the past," Douglas wrote in a letter to producers. "On the night my mother died, Robert was not brought to the window by my father. This makes you an enabler of a sick and dangerous man and helps him in his attempts to rewrite history and blame others for his misdeeds."

'There is no doubt in my mind that Robert Durst got away with murder'
—CODY CAZALAS, FORMER DETECTIVE

Those misdeeds seemed to begin immediately after his mother's death, as Robert—who says his father was distant and not often home—frequently ran away, necessitating calls to police to find him. He graduated from Scarsdale High School and attended Lehigh University, then graduate school at UCLA. Meeting and marrying the pretty, outgoing Kathleen McCormack in 1973 brought him happiness. "It was perfect," he says. But the marriage became troubled because "I was making all the decisions," including one that Kathie would have an abortion because he didn't want kids. "Kathie started changing . . . when I made her get an abortion." Robert admits that on Jan. 31, 1982, the day Kathie disappeared, the couple had gotten into a physical altercation but claims that he dropped her off at the train station so she could visit friends in Manhattan. Robert didn't call police for four days—because, he says, he didn't want them to investigate their troubled marriage.

Robert moved to Texas and began dressing as a woman so he wouldn't be recognized, he says. He became acquainted with Morris Black, who was found murdered nine months later.

2001
After two months on the run, Robert (in his booking photo) was arrested for killing Black. He claimed he shot him in self-defense after a scuffle.

2003
A jury acquitted Robert in Black's murder. He pleaded guilty to two counts of bond jumping and one count of evidence tampering relating to the disposal of a body and was sentenced to five years.

2005
While on parole, Robert was ordered to stay home. During an unauthorized trip to the mall, he ran into the judge from his trial. He returned to jail for more than two months on parole violation.

"Our lives were half argument, fighting, slapping, pushing, wrestling," he says. "It deteriorated from there."

Kathleen's case went cold, but Robert was always under suspicion. In 2000, shortly after police had reopened the investigation into her disappearance, citing new evidence, Robert's longtime confidante Susan Berman—who was considered a key witness—was found shot execution-style in her Benedict Canyon, Calif., house. Robert was questioned but not charged.

Looking for a new start, Robert moved to Galveston, where he disguised himself as a woman and rented a rundown $300-a-month apartment in a rough neighborhood. His neighbor: Morris Black, 71, who had fled some legal troubles in South Carolina. In September 2001 Black's dismembered body was found floating in Galveston Bay, and police zeroed in on Robert, who was on the run and had left bloodstains and physical evidence behind in his apartment. When he was found, Robert claimed he had shot Black in self-defense and disposed of the body in a panic. "We had everything: physical evidence, bloodstains, and he even admitted he had killed Mr. Black," says Cazalas. "He was still found not guilty. I think about that a lot."

Now cut out of the family's business through a $65 million settlement in 2006 and remarried to Debrah Lee Charatan, Robert seems reflective, especially when he talks about the unsolved disappearance of Kathie Durst. "I am complicit in Kathie's not being here," he says matter-of-factly in the documentary. "If she met some normal guy, like, from Long Island, she would have had a bunch of kids and would have lived an average life."

It's comments like those that make producers feel they are close to the truth. "We may never know why he does what he does," says Jarecki. "But after this documentary, I believe everyone will know what happened." ● moments of peace. Raised primarily by his mother, Christina Fulton, after she split from his famous father when he was just a baby, Weston Coppola Cage had a difficult childhood, and his parents eventually clashed in court over finances and his care. Now estranged from Fulton, who couldn't be reached for comment, the heavy-metal musician and actor turned to booze in his late teens to "fill an abyss" that he says existed in large part due to his troubled relationship with his mother. "I dreaded every moment with her," he says. Then his addictions—and life—spun out of control. In 2011, at age 20, he was arrested twice for domestic violence during his brief marriage to Nikki Williams and beaten bloody in a bizarre fight with his personal trainer. "Alcohol became a nightmare," he says. He was drinking up to "30 beers, one box of wine and half a bottle of something hard" mixed with pills in one day, and his friends and family "thought I was digging my grave," he says. And so did he. Landing in the hospital one night in 2012 after going through withdrawal ("It felt like someone was suffocating me, and every light in me was flickering on and off," he recalls), he was telling loved ones where to scatter his ashes.

A FREE MAN
"Since I've gotten out of prison, I've said nothing to nobody about anything," he says.

Cage quit alcohol "cold turkey"; shortly after, he met Danielle. "I fell in love instantaneously," he says of their meeting, around the time his marriage to Williams was ending. "I was surrounded by very toxic people and was just tired of being polluted. Danielle was pure." When they first started talking, "I knew all about his past within the first few minutes," she says. After finalizing his divorce from Williams, Wes wed Danielle at an intimate ceremony in England in 2013. Two days before their wedding, Danielle discovered she was pregnant. "The whole room went silent," she says of spilling the news right before their nuptials. "Everyone was ecstatic." Adds Wes: "I was transported into paradise."

'Having the combination of Danielle and Lucian and my father in my life… is going to keep me here'
—ON MAINTAINING HIS SOBRIETY

Finding "reciprocal love," as he calls it, with Danielle and Lucian has helped Wes find the stability he craved growing up. "Having the combination of Danielle and Lucian and my father in my life—just that trinity—is going to keep me here," he says. "Not even night and day can be used as an analogy to describe how perfect things are from what it was." He's close to Nicolas, 51, and credits his dad with giving him "wonderful experiences" growing up. Says Nicolas now: "To see my son with my grandson is as close to a sense of blissful completion as I ever had. Weston is what I call the total artist… and now he is a loving father."

Though Wes is busy these days recording music and shooting independent films, his favorite role is the one he plays at home. "I used to imagine [my life like this] to make me feel better and get the inner wounds to coagulate," he says. "The fact that it's real now is beyond a blessing." ●

Laraine Newman
SEASONS 1–5
Our humor reflected the last vestiges of the '60s ethos and a punk mentality. Naturally it's hard to look back on the loss of John and Gilda. Gilda especially for me. She was a dear friend. Once we were left in a room for four hours. She used the trash can as her puppet, and I interviewed it. Boy, did we howl.

EARLY DAYS
On Oct. 11, 1975, the first cast was christened "The Not Ready for Prime Time Players." Here season 2 stars (clockwise from top left) Jane Curtin, Gilda Radner, Laraine Newman, Dan Aykroyd, Bill Murray and Garrett Morris and John Belushi clown around.

CENTRAL CHARACTERS
Sketches like Mike Myers and Dana Carvey's "Wayne's World" became decade-defining phenoms, spawning movie franchises.

CHANGING TIMES
"You could think of an idea on Friday and have it on national TV 24 hours later," says Andy Samberg (with Nasim Pedrad, Abby Elliott, Kristen Wiig and Vanessa Bayer before a 2011 skit).

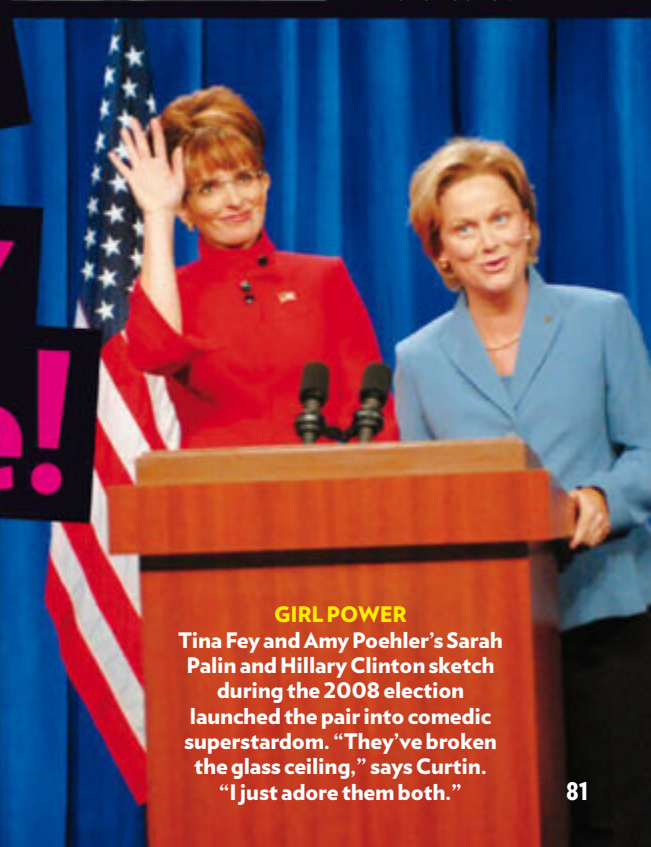

GONE TOO SOON
"Each time we lose someone, it sort of sends you back there for a moment," says Curtin of Belushi and Radner.

LIVE FROM NEW YORK, ICONIC CAST MEMBERS—CHEVY CHASE! DANA CARVEY! JANE CURTIN!—SHARE THEIR FONDEST, FUNNIEST MEMORIES OF ONE OF TV'S LONGEST-RUNNING HITS

By JANINE RAYFORD RUBENSTEIN

GIRL POWER
Tina Fey and Amy Poehler's Sarah Palin and Hillary Clinton sketch during the 2008 election launched the pair into comedic superstardom. "They've broken the glass ceiling," says Curtin. "I just adore them both."

Bill Hader

SEASONS 31–38

My audition was July 21, 2005. I remember getting into the elevator at 30 Rock next to a guy who had tons of props. It was Andy Samberg [left, with Steven Spielberg]. I was really nervous because I hadn't brought props, but later Andy said he was looking at me, going, "Oh man, that guy doesn't need props!"

Andy Samberg

SEASONS 31–37

I remember walking offstage after my first "Update" feature. I'd written it with Bill Hader and two of my childhood friends who were in the hallway freaking out, like, "Dude, we just got laughs on SNL!"

Seth Meyers

SEASONS 27–39

Sitting next to Amy Poehler as she was doing the Sarah Palin rap was probably one of my fondest moments. We'd just gotten back from a writers' strike, and I feel like we were all hitting our stride. I miss the internal politics and our year-end dive bar parties with a lot of poorly executed dance circles.

Dana Carvey

SEASONS 12–18

My Church Lady dress was kind of itchy. I'm still shocked the character got so popular. I guess everybody knows a "church lady." But the funniest cast member to me at that time was Chris Farley. He'd walk into the writers' room completely naked. It was impossible not to laugh.

Dan Aykroyd

SEASONS 1–4

If properly constructed, as it was by the great makeup artist Michael Thomas, you could wear the cone head for a day or two without any problem. From the very beginning we knew we had something with that sketch. And if we had to send footage to another planet for a goodwill ambassadorship, we could send all of Jane's clips.

Cheri Oteri

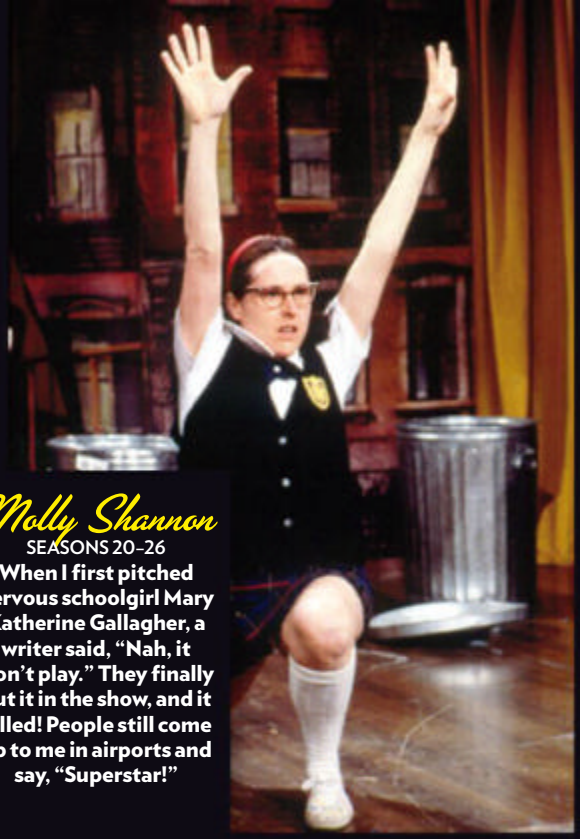

SEASONS 21–25

"Spartans" is one of my favorites. I cheered in high school. One day when Will and I were new, I was stomping around, improvising, and he joined in. Years later Bed Bath & Beyond had us as a fridge magnet!

Jane Curtin

SEASONS 1–5

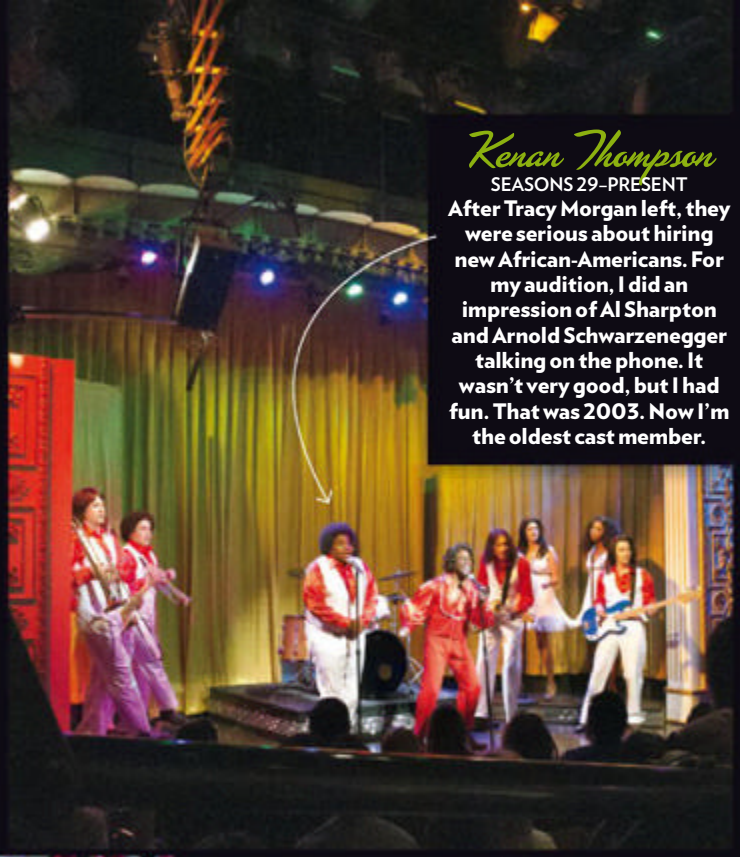

We were all siblings and very protective of one another, but we had our differences. After a while I stopped going to the writers' room because I didn't want to fight. Lorne and I communicated through Gilda. One time he wanted me to rip open my shirt on "Update." Gilda came and said, "Lorne wants to ask you something but he's too afraid."

Molly Shannon

SEASONS 20–26

When I first pitched nervous schoolgirl Mary Katherine Gallagher, a writer said, "Nah, it won't play." They finally put it in the show, and it killed! People still come up to me in airports and say, "Superstar!"

Kenan Thompson

SEASONS 29–PRESENT

After Tracy Morgan left, they were serious about hiring new African-Americans. For my audition, I did an impression of Al Sharpton and Arnold Schwarzenegger talking on the phone. It wasn't very good, but I had fun. That was 2003. Now I'm the oldest cast member.

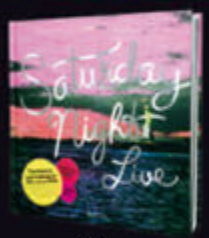

Jimmy Fallon

SEASONS 24–29

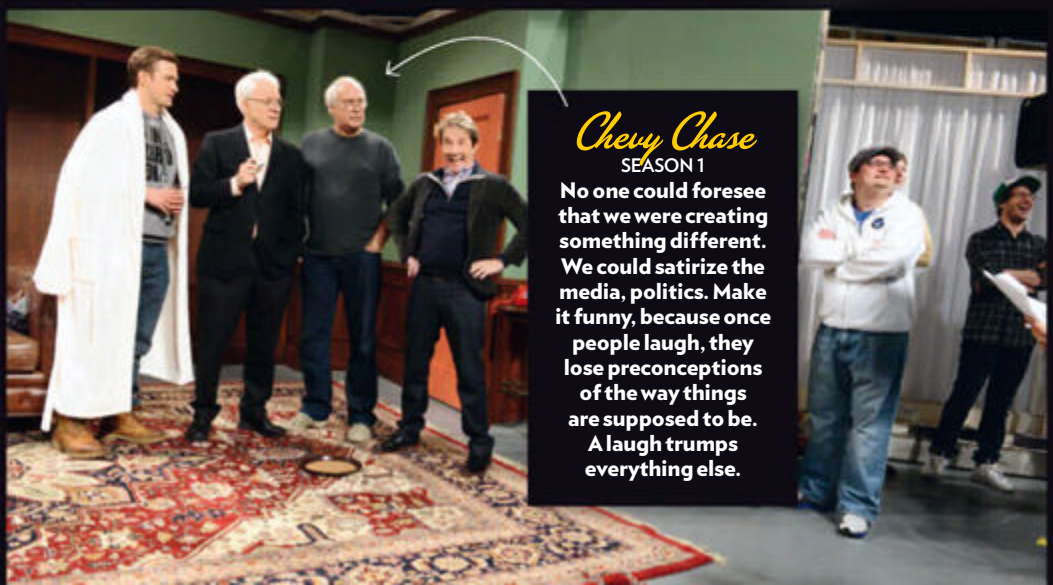

I was just the guy who did impressions and laughed at everything. I tried not to laugh, but I was acting with the funniest humans I'd ever met—Maya Rudolph, Will Ferrell, Horatio Sanz. No one liked it, especially me. But I read that Laurence Olivier was also famous for breaking onstage.

Chevy Chase

SEASON 1

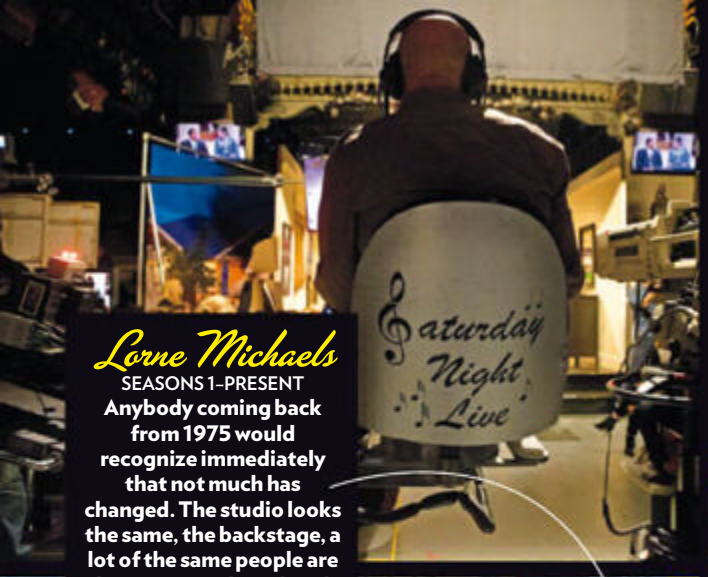

No one could foresee that we were creating something different. We could satirize the media, politics. Make it funny, because once people laugh, they lose preconceptions of the way things are supposed to be. A laugh trumps everything else.

There are pictures of everyone who was ever on the show in the hall on the 17th floor. When I saw my picture there, I freaked out. The women I grew up on were Ana Gasteyer, Cheri Oteri and Molly Shannon. I've yet to meet Molly Shannon. I'll be so starstruck.

Mushroom & Pea Risotto

The shoe designer and avid cook shares a date-night 'dish made with a lot of love'

- 1 qt. vegetable stock
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 2 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil
- 8 oz. cremini mushrooms, cleaned and chopped
- 2 tbsp. minced shallots
- 2 tbsp. minced garlic
- ¾ cup arborio rice
- ¼ cup white wine
- ½ cup frozen peas, thawed
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 2 tbsp. chopped chives

1. Pour the stock into a small pot. Cover, bring to a boil, and then reduce to simmer. Keep at a low simmer while making the risotto.

2. Melt butter and olive oil in a large sauté pan over medium-high heat. Add the mushrooms and shallots; sauté until soft, about 7 minutes. Add the garlic and cook another minute. Add the rice and stir well. Let the rice toast for a few minutes. It will smell nutty and start to absorb some of the liquid in the pan. Add the wine and stir well. Cook until the wine is reduced and the pan is almost dry, about 2 minutes.

3. Reduce heat to medium-low. Add 1 cup of the simmering vegetable stock to the rice and use a wooden spoon to vigorously combine. Once the rice has absorbed the broth and the pan is almost dry again, add another ½ cup of vegetable stock. Stir vigorously again. Continue this process until you've used all of the stock. This will take about 25 to 35 minutes.

4. Remove from heat. Add the peas and season with salt and pepper to taste. Stir well. Sprinkle with chopped chives and serve immediately.

J.K. SIMMONS How I Got Here

After years paying his dues, the Hollywood veteran landed the role of a lifetime—and a Best Supporting Actor nod

During his 30-year acting career, J.K. Simmons has played gruff dads, taciturn cops, even a sadistic neo-Nazi prisoner. Now his latest tough-guy role—as a brutal music instructor in the film Whiplash—has landed him an Oscar nomination and made him a not-quite-overnight sensation. Was the actor, 60, inspired by a real-life teacher? "There might have been a football coach or two whose methods went toward that," says the Detroit native. "But never that far." Actually, the son of a college professor and an arts administrator had a gentler upbringing, finding his love of theater at Montana's Bigfork Summer Playhouse and later winning raves in Broadway musicals. Looking back, Simmons, who just hosted SNL, says he's grateful steady work in character parts let him be there for his wife, Michelle Schumacher, and kids Joe, 16, and Olivia, 13. "I coached Little League teams for six years," he says. "It's just great to be present as a dad." And the Oscar buzz? "Everyone's enjoying all this vicariously with me," he says. "That's a big part of the joy."—JULIE JORDAN

OZ, 1997-2003

"It's clear when Oz fans approach me," Simmons says of his breakout role as a sadistic con. "They keep their distance."

FOR THE LOVE OF THE GAME, 1999

Simmons, after years in theater, landed the part of a Detroit Tigers baseball manager in this Kevin Costner film.

SPIDER-MAN, 2002

Simmons barked as editor J. Jonah Jameson, but "I don't respond well to being screamed at."

THE CLOSER, 2005-2012

Working on the TNT series with Kyra Sedgwick allowed Simmons to spend time with his family in L.A.

JUNO, 2007

The comedy let Simmons play a loving dad. He's "transitioning into being pals" with his own teenage kids.

WHIPLASH, 2014

"It's great that all this is coming my way for a movie I'm proud of," says Simmons (with costar Miles Teller).

After 10 years in the spotlight, Carrie Underwood still starts her day in a very regular way. "The first thing I do in the morning is take my dogs outside. My life is crazy, but I do my best to keep things simple." For the 31-year-old Oklahoma native, that also means having an "effortless" beauty regimen. In her purse: nail files, pressed powder and Almay Butter Kiss lipstick, which has helped the face of the brand branch out from her usual nudes and berries. "I've always been afraid to wear red, but I enjoy the shades Almay has come out with. They're not scary." Her other must-haves include dry shampoo (she'll buy whatever is on sale), a clipless curling iron (the secret to her signature waves) and coconut oil, which she got her husband, Mike Fisher, hooked on. But right now she's stocking up on something other than beauty products. "I just went shopping and came home with lots of baby clothes and stuff like that. My husband was like, 'Whoa, you bought a lot,'" says the expectant star. While she preps for the arrival of her son, Underwood, who reveals, "I always have to have my hair and makeup somewhat done," is also working on ways to make her routine more efficient. "I still want to feel good about myself, even as I bop around the house taking care of baby."

One Last Thing

Anne Hathaway

The Oscar winner, 32, stars in the film Song One, which she also produced with husband Adam Shulman

Last time I was injured
My dog had minor surgery, and she had to wear a cone. She's really smart, so she figured out if she dug the cone into my leg, eventually I would take it off because I couldn't stand it anymore. She really bruised the front of my shin with one jab.

Last time I was wrong
To my husband. My husband and I hosted a screening for Song One, and I said I only needed 10 minutes to get ready. As we were leaving for the screening 20 minutes late, I realized I was wrong. And that I'm 32, and that's not cute anymore.

Last moment of bliss
Christmas morning. A majority of the people I love were with me, and we'd made cinnabuns and were all just that beautiful half-asleep and half-caffeinated. I don't get a lot of those moments, so I was just really grateful for it.

Last time I got frustrated
My cable wasn't working for a long time, so whenever I wanted to watch The Daily Show, I couldn't. A guy had to come out, and he tried to explain it. I still can't tell you what happened, but it works now.

Last time I got sunburned
New Year's 2012 I went scuba diving, and I thought I put sunscreen everywhere, but I didn't manage to put it on my seat, shall we say. It was an interesting few days recovering from that one.
